PLANS A SURPRISE

KARNIVAL KREWE WILL ECLIPSE ALL PAST EFFORTS.

WILL HAVE NO DAY PARADE

BUT THERE'LL BE A CALORIC SEA SON IN ANCIENT MUNICIPALITY.

acter of the Festivities, but They Will Surpass All Past Events-Everything to Be at Night.

The Karnival Krewe's festivities this fall will eclipse everything that organization has ever attempted in the past. King Ki Ki IV., of the Karnival Krewe, has com-manded his loyal subjects to search every nook and corner of the earth, from the North to the South pole, from the rising to the setting sun, for something new for Karnival week. Any subject, however high his title, who dares to even suggest to the royal council anything old or anything ever before seen in the great West, will be immediately beheaded. The seal of se-crecy is on the lips of the krewe as to the detail of the arrangement, but it has leaked out that the new features already decided on are of such a nature that Kan-sas City and the whole Southwest can be assured that Karnival week, 1899, will be a

Many of the most prominent business men of the city are members of the Karnival Krewe, and they are all unanimously something new in the way of entertainment, and something on a larger scale than has ever been given before. It is stated that the only feature which will be at all similar to the past will be the flower pa rade, and this will be upon a much more elaborate scale than ever before. One new feature which is announced is a grand masque ball, a most appropriate part of a genuine carnival festivity. This, it is ex-pected, will be given in Convention hall and will be a gorgeous attraction. The committees on parades, decorations filuminations, music and other attractions illuminations, music and other attractions and for the grand select masked ball are most enthusiastic and confident that their efforts will far outdo anything of the kind ever before even attempted in the West. The members of the executive board, while not quite ready to make public announcement of its plans, give it as their opinion that, with the assistance expected and never yet denied the krewe, they will offer daily and nightly all through carnival week so many and such varied attractions and amusements that it can be truly said they will "keep something going on all the time" from Monday morning till Saturday night. How it is to be done is, for the present, the krew's secret, but on the present, the krew's secret, but on the prediction that it will prove a grand success and attract many thousands more than any previous carnival week every member of the krewe will stake his reputation.

Owing to the objections of the merchants, there will be no day narades exceptions.

member of the krewe will stake his reputation.

Owing to the objections of the merchants, there will be no day parades, except the flower parade, but the members of the krewe say that they do not intend to have the visitors come here and have no special attractions for them to see except at night. They intend to have something on the street all the time through the day, as well as the evening entertainments. In this way they feel certain they will solve the problem of keeping the people here all the week. There will be something to interest them every hour of their stay and something which they cannot see by going to any other city. Definite announcement of what these plans are will be awaited with interest.

THOUGHT HE HAD 'EM.

Un in the Morning and Found a Monkey Resting on His Bed.

From the New York Press. ere sitting il known beer garden uptown one Sat urday night, mixing beer and wine, regardiess of consequences, and enjoying life. They were a well dressed lot of clubout on a bender. Good stories were fold, telling jokes were sprung and healthy laughter was all but constant. An Italian organ grinder entered, accompanied by his through his entire repertory twice. Then, instead of passing the hat for the organ grinder's reward, someone suggested that they buy the monkey. Everybody cheered the suggestion, and the price was asked. The Italian whined and said he could not part with his pet, his companion, his breadwinner. They urged him, and he named a ridiculous figure. Finally they compromised on $10 and the boys made up a pool for that amount. The organ grinder departed, and the monkey was secured to a leg of the table.

The monkey pleased the boys by his antics, and they urged the Italian to go through his entire repertory twice. Then, instead of passing the hat for the organ state. He was promoted through gallantry in the field during the late war.

Next came the raffle, with its accustomed rounds of drinks and excitement. The winner had to set them up twice, and the party started for home. The monkey was perched on his winner's shoulder, a position he was quite accustomed to, and he made no trouble on the way. The entire party accompanied the winner to the door of his house. It was high noon of a dark and stormy Sunday when the hero of the previous night's raffle awoke from a dream-disturbed sleep with a racking headache and a blank memory. He raised himself to his elbow in bed and looked around the room with a sad and sorrowful gaze. His eyes glanced to the bed and fell on the monkey, peeping out of the warm covers at the foot, where he made a comfortable nest for himself. A cold chill chased up and down his spine and a perspiration of fear moistened his forehead. He reached for the call button, pressed it with trembling fingers, and suffered all kinds of mental tortures until his valet responded. Then he hissed in an agonized whisper:

"Louis, look there on the bed. If you see nothing there telephone at once to Roosevet the spital for Dr. —"

"Louis, look there on the bed. If you see nothing there telephone at once to Roosevelt hospital for Dr. —"
"If you please, sir, I see an animal."
"What kind of an animal."
"A monkey, sir."
"Oh, sil right; you can go."
Louis went, the young man smiled a sickly smile, turned over and fell asleep once more.

Made in Kansas City, U. S. A.

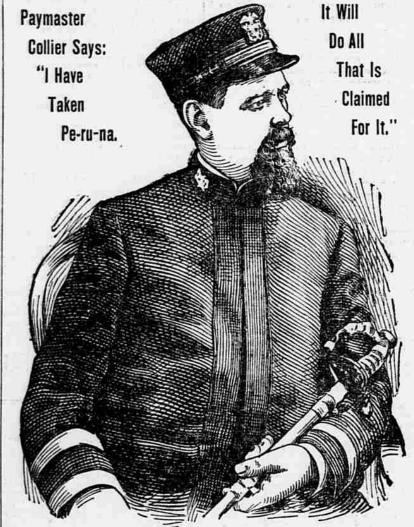

The versatility and adaptability of newspaper men has a recent illustration in the person of Frank Markward, of the Kansas City Manufacturer. Mr. Markward has found time in the midst of his duties as general newsgatherer and hustier to write a very pretty little lullady poem which has been set to catchy music by M. Bert Howard, the saxophone soloist of the Third Regiment band. "The Sand Man From Nod." is the title of this piece of genuine "Made in Kansas City" music and it is meeting with much favor from music lovers. This is understood to be Mr. Markward's first venture in song writing, but it should encourage him to do more. Mr. Howard has already composed a number of popular marches, waitzes and other instrumental music.

Burlington Train Service to St. Joseph and the North Not Discontinued. The statements made that the Burlington Route were using the Missouri Pacific tracks on account of the high water are not warranted by the facts. The line is open and being operated to St. Joseph and points north, via Cameron Junction, over their own tracks. Service has been discontinued to points between Waldron and Atchison until further notice.

The St. Petersburg correspondent of the London Daily Mall speaks of an enormous meteor which fell into the sea off Finland on the 12th ultimo, and he says that it becomes by Russian law the property of the czar. It is estimated by the savants to be worth several millions of roubles. One naturally asks how large can a mass, rich in iron, be to have such a value, and how much is it going to cost to lift it out of the stratum of clay which it has penetrated to a depth of twenty-five feet?

The parents of children at the Lowel The parents of children at the Lowell school have bought 200 supplementary readers to be used in the classroom work. Mrs. Griffin believes that requiring these books to be bought by the children instead of being furnished free by the school board is a good thing, in that it adds one volume to the family library which in certain school localities is altogether too small. The books bought at the Lowell school were selected from Hawthorne and Lowell, biographies of American statesmen and stories of the early days of the republic.
